U. S. FOOLED INTO THE JUNKING OF NAVY

ARMY TREATY IS VIOLATED IS CLAIM OF HOUSE CHAIRMAN

Thomas S. Butler of the House Naval Affairs Committee Claims Other Countries Have Built More Ships Than They Discarded—Congressman's Statement Published In the Army and Navy Journal.

America was "fooled" into scrapping her navy while other signatories of the 1922 arms treaty have violated the spirit of the agreement by building more ships than they discarded, Chairman Butler of the house naval affairs committee declared Thursday in a statement published in the Army and Navy Journal.

Butler is author of the bill now on the house calendar to authorize construction of 10 light cruisers.

The realization had come to him, he said, that government must be by force and an international arms agreement could be obtained only by fear. He added that America had no cruisers that would invite any fear whatsoever.

"I would like the American people to be told what the American commissioners told the house naval affairs committee of their experiences while sitting in the Geneva convention that was called by the League of Nations, and to which America was invited and in which America gladly joined in the hope that an agreement would be reached providing for a limitation upon cruiser construction," he said.

"I would further like the American people to know that some of those nations which are standing out against America include the fighting Balkan states that have neither ports nor ships and want America to interfere in the land armaments of Europe to their benefit—and they are not concerned in naval armament at all.

"Our commissioners were invited to sit upon the washboard on the back porch and were permitted to go home thru the back gate. The next time they attend the conference they will find not only the front gate and the front door open, but they will be invited to sit on the haircovered sofas in the front parlor.

"For one, I have come to realize that nations, like individuals, have always been governed by force and will continue to be so governed in the future.

"Having succeeded in including the nations to destroy some of their great ships, I supposed that a friendly relation had begun and that when America sank some 800,000 tons of good steel, those other nations would appreciate the generosity expressed in our willingness to make such an enormous sacrifice.

"But when I learned in the past week that those other nations have built more ships than they sacrificed and that the spirit of the five-five-three treaty was not observed thru the construction of smaller vessels than those limited by the treaty, I began to conclude that America had been fooled.

"I plead guilty to being among those who were deluded, for I reported the bill to the house and asked the house to pass it, and requested the president to destroy more than $300,000,000 worth of good ships.

Generally Gets His

Jud Tunkins says a fool and his money are soon parted, as the old proverb says. The lawyer who parts 'em manages to hang on to his share. —Washington Star.

"I have simply promised myself—a promise that will be kept—that I will never do anything of the like again. I voted for the reduction of the amounts of money that those nations abroad admitted they owed us. I was delighted to do it. Indeed, I believe there was a time when I would have gladly remitted all the debts.

"And now I see they have been using those remissions we granted for the building of ships, and thereby compel America to spend several hundred millions in order to create a fleet comparable to theirs. Our eyes are open as far as I am concerned, and will not be closed.

American "Scrub" Oaks Being Used By France

Washington, D. C.—The small and scraggly black scrub oak, or bear oak, of barren lands in northeastern United States is being made use of in France with considerable success to provide brush cover for similar lands used as game preserves on large country estates, according to Dr. David G. Fairchild of the United States Department of Agriculture, who has recently returned from a botanical exploration that took him around the world.

The species is a dwarf oak, hardly to be dignified by the name of tree, for its usual height is seldom more than nine feet, though specially favored specimens may reach eighteen or twenty. But it grows rapidly and seems to do better on stony ground in France than any of the native shrub or small-tree species.

FATTEST OF BABIES

This is Edith Markus of New York, eight months old, who is believed to be the fattest baby of her age. She tips the scales at 30 pounds, 10 ounces.

Thief Invents Lock

Kingston, Ontario—Red Ryan, bank robber, thinks he has a theftproof lock for mail bags. He invented it in prison and is getting a patent.

Would Bar Children to All Degenerates

New York.—The mentally and physically unfit should be denied children as the only means of preventing the degeneration of mankind, Dr. Adolf Lorenz, noted Vienna surgeon, said.

"Our sense of humanity is destroying humanity," he asserted. "In saving the weak of mind from the hazards of a hard and selfish world, by prolonging the lives of the constitutionally weak persons with hereditary tendencies toward physical and mental disease, we are allowing more and more of the poorer human stock to survive and reproduce."

"The only way in which to check the tendency toward degeneration and turn the tide the other way is to prevent the poorest stock from reproducing. I am afraid that we are still a long way from doing that."

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Cincinnati—As the result of a shooting which ended a quarrel over a kissing game at a party here, Arthur Wade, 37, and Rex Fowler, 36, are in a serious condition. Miss Lena Wade sister of Wade, is held as a witness. According to her story her brother objected to Fowler engaging in the kissing game with the other women at the party.

Akron—Alfred N. Ayres, 32, of Barberton, convicted of killing his wife with a stick of fire wood on November 20, was sentenced by Common Pleas Judge L. S. Pardee to life imprisonment in the Ohio penitentiary.

Columbus—Colonel Wilson, of Belmont county, was reappointed commissioner of motor vehicles by Secretary Elect Clarence J. Brown. The Ohio State Automobile association and Automobile clubs thruout the state endorsed Wilson. Miss Nellie Gray was reappointed secretary to Wilson.

Westerville—Dr. Edmund A. Jones 84, former state school commissioner and a professor at Otterbein university for more than 25 years died at his home here.

Akron—When two Akron-Barberton traction cars crashed at Barberton, five persons are known to have been injured. One of the motormen disregarded a rail light at a switch causing the accident officials believe.

Youngstown—Rev. Paul Rish, of Maron's church was busily engaged in sewing a rent in his cassock when he heard a command to "put up your hands." Advancing toward the gunmen as tho to obey, the priest suddenly grabbed the wrist of his assailant and wrested a pistol from his hand. As the would-be-burglar fled, Risk attempted to fire at the fleeing form but found the gun unloaded.

Insects, Savant Warns, May Displace Mankind

Cleveland, Ohio.—The biblical admonition of old: "Go to the ant, thou sluggard," was really a prophecy, for insects are about to inherit the earth. Such is the warning of Prof. Clarence H. Kennedy, Ohio State university entomologist, who declared that ants, bees, and other socialized insects may some day supersede man as lords of the universe.

During the countless ages in which man busied himself with wars and rumors of wars, the lowly ant and the busy bee have toiled away and their dominion includes the far corners of the earth, Kennedy said. Man has reached the peak of his development, Kennedy warned, and these insects may watch or accomplish his relegation to the realm of the dinosaur and the pterodactyl.

FARM TRAGEDY MAN AND WIFE ARE MURDERED

Charles Halterman Was Shot With His Own Gun and Wife Killed With Hatchet.

A woman's agonized cry of "oh, Sam, don't!" was the chief clue upon which officials were working in their search for the thieves, who early Thursday, brutally murdered Mr. and Mrs. Charles Halterman at their farm home in Northern Fayette county.

The cry was uttered by Mrs. Halterman, just before she was killed by blows from a hatchet wielded by one of the men who a moment before had murdered her husband, with his own shotgun. It has resulted in the arrest on suspicion of Samuel Satterfield, farm laborer, who is held until charges that he had made threats against Halterman are cleared up.

The Halterman's apparently were awakened from their sleep by a disturbance in their chicken coop. Arming himself with his shotgun and accompanied by his wife, Halterman went to investigate. Apparently he was met in the darkness by thieves who wrested the weapon from him, turned it upon him and later attacked the wife with a hatchet.

Leo Halterman, a brother, awakened by the gunshot, heard Mrs. Halterman's screams and ran to the aid of his relatives. When he reached the yard his brother lay dead with wounds in his head and back, and Mrs. Halterman, her head crushed and shoulders and body cut, lay dying. He heard an automobile speeding away from the house, he declared.

Sheriff Ramsey announced that he expected to arrest another man who may have had connection with the crime.

Satterfield, according to Leo Halterman, the brother, was employed at the Halterman farm last spring and was discharged for intoxication. Leo Halterman is also authority for the statement that Satterfield has been heard to make threats against Charles Halterman on several occasions.

Searchers found a bloody hatchet in the woodshed at the Halterman home, supposedly the one with which Mrs. Halterman had been murdered. No trace of Halterman's shotgun has been found, and it is supposed that the murderers took it away with them.

He paid the fine and costs and was discharged.

He was born in this city October 1, 1926. Besides the parents one sister, Patricia, and one brother, Paul Ford McGinnis, are living.

The funeral, which will be private, will be held at the home Christmas morning at 9 o'clock. Rev. W. S. Fisher will officiate. The interment will be at Kingston.

SENT TO SEVILLE

Thomas E. Campbell, who has been named by President Coolidge as the American commissioner to the great exposition soon to be held in Seville, Spain.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT ON SOUTH COURT

Ford Coupe Runs Off Culvert and Husband and Wife Painfully Injured.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Stephenson, of Kent, sustained severe injuries Thursday evening on South Court street, when their car, a Ford coupe, ran off a culvert just south of the residence of H. S. Hulse.

Mr. Stephenson was cut about the face by flying glass from the windshield and his wife sustained a fracture of her left knee cap. She was also cut about the face with broken glass.

The injured people were brought to this city by Emanuel Dresbach and were taken to the office of Dr. H. C. Allen, where they received surgical aid. The accident was explained by Mr. Stephenson, as having been caused by a nut coming off the radius rod which controls the steering gear, making control of the car impossible.

They were on their way to Jackson to spend Christmas with his parents, who later came and took them to their home at Jackson.

The High School Boys Defeat Hillsboro and Girls Take Game From Monroe.

Circleville high boys and girls' cage squads brought home the bacon in both ends of a double header at C. H. S. gym Friday night. The boys took a 20-13 decision from Hillsboro high and the girls defeated Monroe township 9-6.

The Roundtown lads who had met three straight reverses started off with a bang and got a 9 to 1 jump on their bewildered opponents. This nice lead was the result of some fine pass work and crack shooting.

As the game went on however the Tigers weakened badly and slowly the Downstaters forged forward, the count being 15 to 14 at the third quarter, Roundtown on top. The local 1926. Besides the parents one sister, Patricia, and one brother, Paul Ford McGinnis, are living.

The game was featured by Circleville's passing and Vlerebome and morning at 9 o'clock. Rev. W. S. Hills shooting, the latter being the on-Fisher will officiate. The interment will be at Kingston.

The girls' game booked as the main attraction was marred somewhat by a long delay between halves. Referee Ross who had officiated in the boys and the first half of the girls games held up his hand for silence and announced to the crowd that he knew nothing of girls rules and that he intended to quit then and there. Ross left the floor and a long, tiresome delay followed. R. R. Bales finally being engaged to complete the game.

The encounter itself was featured by close guarding on both sides as the score will indicate.

The half ended with the score 5 all but in the second session. Monroe was held to one lonely point while F. Puckett and Jones scored 3 and 1 counters respectively.

This marked the third consecutive victory for the girls and they have yet to be defeated. More power to them. During the course of the evening the newly elected Circleville cheer leading team composed of Herman Compton and Joe Barnes, junior and sophomore respectively, showed their wares in fine style.

FOUR ARMY

OFFICERS

Killed In Airplane Collision At Chanute Field.

Rantoul, Ill., Dec. 22.—Four officers of Chanute Field were killed today when their two airplanes crashed headon in midair above the field.

The dead are Captain Harold G. Foster, world war flier of Chicago; Second Lieutenant Ralph L. Lawter and First Lieutenants Henry W. Kunkel and Albert J. Clayton.

Foster and Lawter were in one plane and Kunkel and Clayton in the other, and both planes were cruising over the field. R. C.
Leeman, a traveling salesman, was driving past the flying field when he saw the ships collide about 400 feet above the ground and a mile from the airdome.

He apparently was the only witness of the accident. He hurried to the scene and retrieved two bodies, then hurried to the airdome for aid. Neither plane caught fire when they collided.

Lieutenant Kunkel was piloting one plane and took to the air 10 minutes before Lieutenant Lawter, who piloted a De Haviland. When the accident occurred the planes were about one mile south and two miles west of Chanute Field.

Lawter was flying northeast and Kunkel southwest, when Lawter attempted to fly under Kunkel's ship, and in doing so knocked off the landing gear when his upper wing struck it.
The ships crashed about 300 feet apart.

Three of the officers were dead
when picked up, but Captain Foster lived until he reached the hospital. All the officers were members of the U. S. air corps here.

A board of officers was appointed immediately after the accident to investigate. Several officers attributed the accident to a fog, and expressed the opinion that Lawter dipped to try to avoid a collision.

Apparently none of the flyers had time to try to save themselves by use of their para-chutes. Lawter's home was in Huntington, W. Va., Clayton's at West Philadelphia, Pa., and Kunkel's at Columbia, Mo.

FINE EXHIBIT

An exhibit of interest to the general public is on display in the corridor of the High School building. It is the work from the manual training department of the school of the pupils in the eighth grade.

It consists of an array of pictures which have been framed by the pupils who designed and made the very artistic frames.
They are made in an assortment of shapes and designs and are really beautiful.

An interest in the affairs of the pupils often spurs them on to greater achievements and this exhibit is well worth seeing.

One trouble with the voice of conscience is that it sometimes speaks a foreign language.

ROOSEVELT

Tells of the Wild Dogs Tigers Fear.

In India there are wild dogs so fierce they are feared by even the tiger and the leopard, points out Kermit Roosevelt in an article in this week's Liberty. "One noon when we were collecting small birds along a dry water-course," he writes, describing the experiences of the recent Roosevelt hunting-party in India, "we came on a red dog of the Deccan. These hunting dogs will clear a district of game in no time. They never relinquish a trail, and, fighting in concert as they do, there is nothing that can stand up to them. I have been told by many hunters, who were in a position to know whereof they speak, that red dogs will drive a tiger from his kill."

"A friend of mine had an interesting experience with them," Roosevelt continues. "A native came into camp and told him that a pack of wild dogs had treed a leopard. He took his rifle and hurried off with his informant. They were not long in coming upon a dozen or more females and young dogs. These ran away, but didn't go far before they stopped and turned around."

"They evidently were in no mood to leave. Fifty yards farther on, the natives pointed out the leopard crouching in a high tree, snarling and growling. Six or eight big male hunting dogs were grouped beneath the tree. My friend fired and killed the leopard. It had no sooner struck the ground than the dogs were upon it. My friend shot two of the dogs before they ran off."

THE COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS TREE

Every year since the first Community Christmas tree was illuminated on the Court House lawn by the members of the American Legion the number of little hands that reached to Santa Claus for the always ready gift of fruit and sweets has increased until the boys have found that they must prepare for an immense crowd. Santa never refuses to give to anyone at this season of the year and the members of the American Legion who have been instrumental in securing the services of this popular man for this occasion, hopes that the children will enjoy having Santa and the Christmas tree as much as they will enjoy having them receive the gifts.

Santa only promised to stop on his busy journey on Christmas eve at the earnest solicitation of the Legionnaires and they in turn promised that the children would not be late and detain him any longer than was absolutely necessary. So be on time and be up to the Court House on Christmas eve promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

Poorhouse Inmates Paid $750 a Year

London.—Britain's most luxurious almshouse has two vacancies. The almshouse is Morden college, Blackheath, and each resident is provided with a self-contained flat of two furnished rooms and a small kitchen; free light, coal and attendance, free medical treatment; $750 a year and $50 extra for laundry.

There are beautiful gardens, bowling green, billiard rooms, library, recreation room and dining hall. The old men inmates are subject to little or no discipline, wear no badge or uniform to advertise their position, and can stay out as late as they like, and may even stay away for weeks at a time without losing their pay.

They must be old merchants, manufacturers or traders, who, through no fault of their own, have fallen on evil days. Morden college has room for 40 unsuccessful merchants, and as the present average age is seventy-six, changes are fairly frequent.

Morden college was founded by Sir John Morden, a prosperous London silk merchant of the Seventeenth century. When three of his ships were reported missing, he considered himself ruined, and sought service as a clerk with another merchant. He vowed that if fortune returned to him he would make provision for aged merchants who had fallen on evil days by losing ships at sea.

One day he heard that his three long-lost ships had arrived in the Thames, richly laden with eastern merchandise, and found himself a rich man once more, able to carry out his vow.

An editor who needs copy may make an ordinary citizen famous in a quarter column.

A few cents that you won't miss—but it will mean so much next Christmas when you get it in a nice, substantial check.

Another Flapper There Was

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

EDWARD NORTON, aged twenty-two, and Marian Kayes, aged twenty, had been "playing round together" all the afternoon. They had joined some of the other young people at tennis for an hour or so, then they had gone in swimming.

Now they sat on the hotel veranda, Marian looking so lovely after her romp in the ocean that a first glance invited a second.

She and Edward Norton were talking easily, frankly, like two young boys. They were talking about college fraternities, it happened, and Edward said he knew the grip of a certain order, not his own, and in order to show its intricacies to Marian he had to clasp her hand in his. She bungled dreadfully the first time so there were repeated hand clasplings. Then their ginger ale came and they sat and sucked the cooling beverage through straws, the while Marian swinging her slender young legs from the railing of the veranda where she had perched herself.

Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Smith who sat within the curtained drawing room, watching Edward and Marian, had spent their girlhood some thirty years ago. In those days girls did not wear knee-length skirts nor one-piece bathing suits, and they did not shingle their hair.

"Just see them holding hands out there," said Mrs. Smith to her companion. "And look at that girl's skirts. I actually caught a glimpse of her knee—bare knees. It's really disgusting."

"Oh, I think something ought to be done about it," said Mrs. Brown. "And the things they do," added Mrs. Smith. "They don't think anything of going from one roadhouse to another dancing and eating—and sometimes it's tomorrow morning before they get home. And the boys don't propose the way they used to. They discuss marriage as two men would a business partnership. Sometimes the girl suggests it first—without a blush—and then they talk it over. Oh, it's really awful."

Now it happened that from where Edward Norton and Marian Kayes sat what they said in their tuneful young voices could not be heard above the ocean's ceaseless roar, but what those two middle-aged women said could be heard by them. As they sat there trying to decide whether they would take a walk or just sit and talk, they tried not to indicate to each other that they were hearing the voices inside the window. Edward, however, was beginning to feel a trifle embarrassed.

"Listen," said Marian when Mrs. Smith had made the last remark. "Are they talking about us? Do they think that we are all like that?"

"That's what most of the old ones do think," said Edward, regarding his cuff button with some embarrassment. "Of course, I know that the fellows I know are no rougher, on the average, than the fellows my father knew—because Dad and I took the trouble to compare notes and to go at the thing reasonably—and I don't believe the flappers, as they call them, are any different, at heart, than the girls my mother knew."

"It's too bad to disappoint them," said Marian. "People like those old women. It would be fun, in a way, to go off and have dinner at a roadhouse, and dance and then go on to another roadhouse and dance."

Edward Norton stood up and, taking Marian's arm, made her rise, too. "Let's go," he said, and fifteen minutes later he and Marian were speeding away from the hotel.

So they went to a rather gay roadhouse and dined and then danced, and from there sped on to another roadhouse.

"We're doing these things," said Marian. "But after all we aren't living up to the picture those women painted. We aren't talking the way they said we talked. I don't believe any of the girls do."

"You mean about—about marriage and everything," said Ned, and then as Marian nodded yes, he went on, "because if young people were as frank as all that it wouldn't be so hard to—propose."

"Do you suppose it is hard for a man to propose," asked Marian.

Ned slowed down his car and looked keenly at his companion. "Don't you know it would be hard?" he asked. "Just because you girls dress the way you do and go swimming with us and everything doesn't mean that we are really a bit better acquainted than as if we just sat around in conservatories and drawing rooms the way they used to do—it doesn't make proposing any easier, I mean."

"Edward Norton," said Marian with mock solemnity, "you talk as if there was some one you wanted to propose to and you didn't know how to go about it."

"There is," said Norton. "Is she a flapper with shingled hair and short skirts and everything—?"

"Yes," stammered Ned. "Am I the flapper?" asked Marian, looking quite solemnly at him with eyes that were round and dark there in the starlight.

"Why, Marian, of course you are," said Ned awkwardly taking her hands. "Let's go home, then," said Marian. "And if I ever can get acquainted with those women I'm going to tell them that it's true about us flappers. We are dreadfully bold and we do our own proposing."

Peace and Faith

Senator Park Trammell was talking in Lakeland about the era of universal peace.

"I used to think before the World war crashed down on us," he said, "that universal peace had already come; but the World war has given me such a low opinion of humanity that now I think, Baptist though I am, that it will never come."

"Those who believe in universal peace certainly have faith. Faith! It's a wonderful thing. A school ma'am said to a boy one day:

"James, what is faith?" "Faith," said James, "is believin' what you know ain't so."

New Religious Plan

To discover the religious problems which perplex the man in the street, Rev. F. L. H. Millard, vicar of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Brixton, London, is setting aside certain Sundays when, instead of a sermon, questions will be asked by worshippers from their pews. The vicar also will question the congregation from the pulpit.

Winning Popularity

The wit of conversation consists more in finding it in others, than in showing a great deal of yourself; he who goes from your conversation pleased with himself and his own wit, is perfectly well pleased with you.—La Bruyere.

AMUSEMENTS

One of the most thrilling romantic periods in the history of the west is brought amazingly to life in "The Outlaw Express" at the Metropolitan theater. Leo Maloney, the star of this Pathe release has caught the spirit of the old stage coach days and incorporated it in this melodrama of high spirit and adventure.

The story concerns itself with the machinations of gang of outlaws who are robbing the express of the gold bullion being shipped across the country. There is no clue to their identity, and the mystery is indeed a baffling one. But Maloney arrives on the scene and things begin to hum. One little bit of evidence leads to another and finally he is able to vindicate an honest man, and jail the guilty one. And he does all this in one of the most dramatic climaxes we have ever seen. In other words "The Outlaw Express" is a picture not to be missed.

Man and Horsepower

According to Dr. Thomas T. Read, the energy output of an average workman is one-tenth of a horsepower. The energy expended by a coal miner in an eight-hour day equals that found in two pounds of coal.

Sea's Death Summons

The "calling of the sea" is an old English term for a ground-swell. When this occurs on a still night the sound is sometimes heard for miles inland. Inhabitants of the seaside towns looked on it as a summons by death. Tennyson refers to this phenomenon again in "Crossing the Bar" —"And one clear call for me."

Versatile Steeplejack

All the qualifications of the wireman and more are part of the stock in trade of the steeplejack. He cannot take laborers to the top of a lofty church spire or chimney which needs repairing, so he must be prepared to work as mason, slater, bricklayer and carpenter.

Aprons Worn in Streets

About the time Shakespeare was a school boy, more than four centuries ago, it was a common or rather a stylish practice for women to wear aprons as part of their street attire. It was a day of ornamented dress for women, who also carried small mirrors attached by ribbons to their belts, which they used to see that their wigs were on straight.

Device That Produces Visual Form of Music

A screen on which are projected fleeting colors may become an essential part of a symphony orchestra concert in the future, if a device demonstrated at the meeting of the Association of German Natural Scientists and Physicians in Duesseldorf by Alexander Laszlo, a musical composer of Munich, comes into general use. Previous attempts to correlate a visual form of music have been made by the French composer Scriabine and others but, it was stated, it is scientifically impossible to follow any relation between the wave lengths of light, which determine color, and of sound, which determine pitch. However, it can be done by correlating the light effects with the individuality of the composer. The Laszlo apparatus was made by a large optical firm in Dresden, and makes use of six separate projectors, which operate in conjunction with a piano.

COLUMBUS BANK TELLER

Routs Attempted Bandit Who Made Good His Escape Empty Handed.

Columbus, Dec. 23.—Nerve of a bank teller at the City National bank foiled an attempted one-man hold-up there Wednesday morning.

The attempt at banditry occurred while the bank was filled with Christmas depositors and the bandit escaped before most of them knew what had taken place.

Not until John L. Brown, the nervy bank teller shouted "stop that man," did anyone other than Brown and the bandit know that there had been a demand for $1,000, a gun flourished, a threat to shoot, a bluff on the part of Brown, and the flight of the bandit.

The attempted hold-up occurred so quietly and quickly that most of the employees of the bank were without knowledge of what had occurred five minutes after the bandit had escaped down Pearl street.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

EAGLES CHRIST- MAS TREAT

On Christmas afternoon after the busy rush of the previous evening Santa Claus will distribute gifts to all who desire them at the door of the Eagles' club room on North Court street.

The Fraternal Order of Eagles will take this method of bringing good cheer to the hearts of many at this beautiful Christmas season when Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men is on the lips and in the hearts of all who really enjoy this beautiful Feast.

When Christ came on earth nearly two thousand years ago to bring Peace and Good Will he was the recipient of gifts from the Wise Men from the far East and the beautiful custom has come down to us in all its splendor until today when to see a little child wish for a toy or gift which has not been gratified is a sad sight.

All children are welcome and the local order has planned a very pleasant treat for those who will call at the door of their club room on Christmas afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Telling Time by Knots

One of the earliest methods of telling time was that of burning a piece of rope in which knots had been made at intervals. When the rope burned to one knot it was one o'clock. When it reached the second knot it was two o'clock, etc.

The Wilder Cash Store will be open Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings.

Footwear Styles in Wide Variety

Demands for Every Occasion Are Met by Season's Offerings.

Shoes have long been recognized as a style requisite in their own right, and will continue to be very important requisites while present styles in skirts hold good. As a result, observes a fashion writer in the New York Times, women are seemingly giving greater attention to footwear than ever before. The time and energy spent on the selection of a hat have been to some extent transferred to the choice of shoes. Consequently, shoes have become as diversified as millinery, and in order to be well shod one must wear the appropriate shoes for the occasion. In fact, there is little excuse for going astray in this matter, for shoes are now divided into fairly definite classes—for sports wear, shopping and other daytime purposes, afternoon occasion wear and evening usage. For sports and the routine of daytime black and brown are the preferred colors; then for the afternoon shoe more latitude is permitted, both in color and leathers. Evening slippers are seen in every conceivable color, and in metallic fabrics, silver and gold kid.

Oxfords are, of course, the favored choice for sports wear, and this season are seen with fancy perforations, fringed tongues and bandings, with or without side buckles. Calfskin is used most and is often trimmed with alligator or lizard. For daytime wear either the "dressy" oxford or single-strap pump is preferred. The oxfords are cut lower this year to show off the upstanding tongue. Many have but two eyelets, and these are fastened with a wide ribbon lace. As regards the pump, two leathers are often combined, the vamp of the shoe being of plain kid or suede and the strap trimming of one of the novelties. Intricate cut-out work has been dispensed with in these shoes, but is seen in both afternoon and evening slippers.

With the afternoon pump more color and design is used. For instance, light grays, beige and fawn shades are combined with dark browns, grays and black. The leathers include kid, suede calf, some patent leather and the full range of reptilian novelties. Side lacings are slowly gaining favor, but will require some time before they reach the popularity they are having abroad. Cut-out work in lattice effect is used considerably and in most instances this part of the shoe is trimmed to emphasize it. Then, again, many of the shoes have applique designs at the toe, back part of the heel and in a winged design below the instep. Spike heels predominate in this group, although there is one type that is not quite so high; this is called a "medium spike."

It is the evening slipper, however, that is receiving the most attention, both from a standpoint of color and fabric, and not so much from design. Most of them are scantily cut and of the sandal variety, very little to the foot part. Usually a toe covering and heel section which carries the strap is all that is in evidence. However scanty, what is there is important. Brocades in silver and gold are seen, shot with colors of iridescent hue. Hand painting in designs of French forget-me-nots decorates the toes and heels of both satin and kid models. Appliques treated in futuristic themes are posed on silver and gold kid. One pair of evening slippers in a pastel shade has petit point embroidery on toe and straps. And a new leather treatment has been added. It is known as nacre, or mother-of-pearl, for it has all the lovely shimmering effect of a glossy shell and comes in pastel shades only.

CLEAN UP

Farm Woods For Good Lumber
Production, Says Forestry Expert.

Winter is the time to "clean house" in the farm woods. The heavy schedule of farm work is usually slackened and considerable time can be profitably spent in the woods.

The first step in putting the wood-lot in order says L. J. Leffelman, assistant in forestry at the Ohio Experiment Station, is to remove all weed trees, like dogwood, blue beech and ironwood. Diseased and defective trees also should be cut and utilized. These trees occupy valuable growing space which should contain sugar maple, red and white oak, ash and other good trees.

Grapevines are another enemy of good lumber production. It is a familiar sight to see a formerly thrifty stand of ash, tulip poplar and oak saplings which have become stunted, bent, and even broken off by a rank growth of vines. Cut all grapevines close to the ground. It is not necessary to pull them from the trees, as they will soon dry out and fall to the ground.

As a final step in cleaning up the woods, what is called a "thinning" may be needed. Where the trees are too thick it may be advisable to take out some of the overtopped and stunted trees of good species to give more growing space to the better trees.

"A scrub cow costs as much to feed as a purebred, yet one goes on the market as a 'canner,' the other as 'high grade beef.' The same theory applies to the trees in the woodlot, says Mr. Leffelman.

If necessary, assistance can be obtained from the Ohio State Forestry Department at Wooster in selecting trees to remove. With a little care in selection, the future timber crop can be made to consist of only high grade lumber instead of second grade and cull material.

Electric Power

The invention of the electric motor is based on the discovery of Hans Christian Oersted, 1777-1851, that there is a force acting between a magnet and a wire carrying electric current. Following the discovery in 1873 of the reversible action of the dynamo and its use as a motor, efforts began to be made to apply this knowledge to the transmission of power between the years 1880 and 1884.

"Horse Latitudes"

Authorities differ in regard to the origin of the name "horse latitudes," some claiming that it was derived from the fact that vessels with a cargo of horses were often so delayed on account of the claims that the animals perished from lack of water.

BANKERS FOR CHANGE IN COR- PORATION LAWS

Indorsement of Proposed Legislation Is Given By Ohio Association.

Indorsement of the proposed revision of the Ohio corporation laws has been given by the Ohio Bankers' association and the letters were being sent Wednesday from its headquarters urging the bankers of the state to ask members of the legislature to adopt the new code.

In its indorsement the council of administration of the Ohio Bankers' association also praised the committee of the Ohio State Bar Association which has prepared the measure.

The proposed code, the bankers say, will do much toward removing conditions which have resulted in many large manufacturing concerns, most of whose business is done in Ohio, having their corporate entities in other states.
Many corporation taxes which might be paid into Ohio treasuries are paid into those of the other states, it is pointed out.

The bankers' organization also is urging the early passage of the McFadden bill, now pending in congress, without the Hull amendments. Through the Mc-Fadden bill the national banking laws will be liberalized so as to allow national banks equality of competition for certain classes of business with state banks, and charters of the Federal Reserve banks, which expire by limitation in 1932, will be extended.

GOOD LUCK IN APPLES

"Don't send me any more flowers, I'm not dead yet." This message is said to have been sent from a hospital by a famous ball player who had been injured on the playing field. His teammates sent him a big bouquet as a token of their friendship and appreciation of his services. Ball players, however, are a superstitious lot and the sending of flowers is considered as ominous and as a first-class jinx, altogether too suggestive that the player has become a dead one and he can see himself falling down at bat, muffling easy flies and on the way back to the minor leagues.

The luckiness of apples as a gift was brought home strikingly during the world series last fall.
The members of the St. Louis team were sent baskets of apples in St. Louis before they started on the series in which they were considered an outside chance by a great majority of the base ball experts, who expected the New York Yankees to slam the Cardinal pitching to all corners of the lot.

However, the apples arrived and the Cards took them as a lucky omen and then went out and upset the calculations of the base ball world by bringing a pennant to St. Louis for the first time in the memory of the present generation. They have a photograph of the consignment of apples in the archives of the club to show one of the pieces of luck that befell the team.

SEES RADIO MOVIES MATTER OF COURSE

"I expect to see and hear by electricity the Presidential inauguration in 1929 even though I may be thousands of miles away from Washington," declares Dr. Gerald Wendt, director of the division of industrial research, Pennsylvania State college.
He is foreseeing electrical advances that are sure to be made in the next few years by industrial research.
"Single pictures are already being sent across the sea," he points out. "When a more sensitive photo-electric cell is developed, a picture will be transmitted as rapidly as the movie can flash it on the screen. In Washington during the ceremony, the microphone will have a 'microscope' alongside it and I shall be sitting in my own living-room seeing and hearing the entire performance as if I were on the spot. Then we shall have radio movies for every home."

LOANS UP TO $500.

The good things in life not only go to those who save wisely, but are meted out equally as often to those who spend wisely, borrow, if necessary, and invest wisely.

The main thing is to know how and where to get the money, then to invest it wisely. With a talent for wise investment, the man who refuses to go in debt is like the man in the parable who buried his talent lest he should lose it, and the Master made him forfeit it because of lack of industry.

If you are industrious and steady you will always be able to get money at The City Loan, even tho you have only one suit of clothes

why City Loan service is popular—its continuous financial help is ex-be worthy.

A hypocrite is a man who talks of "my" home and "my" car when his wife isn't present.

The Flivver and the Flapper

By WALTER ARNOLD

(Copyright.)

JACK BANCROFT left his car by the curb and went into the apothecary shop to get some cigarettes. When he came out he found a remarkably pretty girl sitting on the back seat. "I am Miss Rolands—Amy Rolands," she said. "You have evidently forgotten me—but won't you please hurry and drive me home? I have some medicine for my aunt who is ill—and I must get home as soon as possible."

"Only too pleased to be of service," replied Jack and, jumping in, started the car. "Er—which way, Miss Rolands?" asked the gallant Jack. "Straight ahead," was the reply—and straight ahead they went.

Jack was perfectly sure that he never had met the girl before. The thing was very mysterious. But she was a pretty girl.

They had driven for two miles out into the country leaving the little town behind them, when the girl, leaning over, touched Jack on the shoulder and said: "There is where I live. Stop at the gate, will you please. You need not drive in."

Jack stopped; his passenger sprang lightly out and entering the grounds of a large house, disappeared in the shrubbery which fringed a side-path.

"The plot thickens," thought Jack and, starting up again, drove down the road a bit and then into the same grounds by a side gate, and up to a large garage which stood back of the mansion to the left. Then, jumping out, he ran around to the front of the house to where the path the unknown girl had taken came out upon a little lawn before the shaded piazza.

"What's up, Jack?" asked some one sitting on the piazza.

"Did a young lady, a remarkably pretty young lady, just come up the path here?" asked Jack.

No, no one had seen any young lady, pretty or otherwise.

And that was chapter one of the adventure of the young lady and the automobile—an adventure which Jack could not keep out of his mind.

Two months later he happened to be stopping at a seaside hotel and his friend, Tom Cranshaw, said to him: "Jack, I will introduce you to one of the prettiest girls you ever saw. She arrived last night with her rich old aunt, Miss Matilda Fagus. There comes Margaret now."

Jack had heard of Matilda Fagus, the eccentric old maid who lived about ten miles below his own town in isolation and state. Jack looked—and there, walking slowly toward them, was the mysterious beauty of his adventure. The introduction was made. Neither Margaret nor Jack "batted an eye," as the vulgar would say. Jack was awfully tempted to say: "I believe we have met once before, Miss Clifford." But he repressed the desire.

He stood it for a whole week, and then, one night, as they sat looking at the moonlit ocean and listening to the hotel orchestra, he said: "Miss Clifford, did you ever know a girl by the name of Amy Rolands?"

"Yes, indeed," replied Margaret, "I know her very well. And do you know, she and I are said to look very like each other? I expect her down here tomorrow night. So you have met her. What did you think of her?"

"I thought her very charming," said Jack. He was just a trifle bewildered. Was it possible that the girl beside him was the same girl he had found sitting in his car that day? He had not had time to study the face of his stowaway passenger, but still—well, in fact, he did not know what to think. Tomorrow he would meet Amy Rolands and then he would know.

The following night, as they sat in the same place, Margaret said: "By the way, Amy Rolands is here."

"Where is she?" cried Jack.

"Sitting beside you," laughed Margaret.

Jack was a little huffed and showed it; the girl had been mystifying him long enough.

"Now, don't be angry," said Margaret. "The story is a very simple one. I didn't explain before because I was not sure, until you asked me last night if I knew Amy Rolands, that you remembered me. You see, I thought I was in love with a young man named Guy Carden. My parents didn't want me to marry him, and sent me to aunt's for safekeeping. I ran away to meet him and got as far as your village. There I saw Aunt Matilda, who had come in pursuit, looking for me, and jumped into your machine to hide. You know the rest. I have learned that the house I told you to leave me at was your own. The joke was on me."

"As your name is still Miss Clifford, I take it that you did not marry Mr. Carden, after all," said Jack.

"No," replied Margaret gravely. "I did not marry him. I walked back to the town, found auntie, and went home with her."

It was three months later, after they had become engaged, that Jack said to Margaret: "Why was it that you did not marry Guy Carden after you had run away from your aunt to meet him?"

"Because," replied Margaret, "on the way to meet him I met somebody I thought I might like better."

U. S. FOOLED INTO THE JUNKING OF NAVY

ARMY TREATY IS VIOLATED IS CLAIM OF HOUSE CHAIRMAN

Thomas S. Butler of the House Naval Affairs Committee Claims Other Countries Have Built More Ships Than They Discarded—Congressman's Statement Published in the Army and Navy Journal.

America was "fooled" into scrapping her navy while other signatories of the 1922 arms treaty have violated the spirit of the agreement by building more ships than they discarded. Chairman Butler of the house naval affairs committee declared, Thursday in a statement published in the Army and Navy Journal.

Butler is author of the bill now on the house calendar to authorize construction of 10 light cruisers.

The realization had come to him, he said, that government must be by force and an international arms agreement could be obtained only by force. He added that America had no cruisers that would invite any fear whatsoever.

"I would like the American people to be told what the American commissioners told the house naval affairs committee of their experiences while sitting in the Geneva convention that was called by the League of Nations, and to which America was invited and in which America gladly joined in the hope that an agreement would be reached providing for a limitation upon cruiser construction," he said.

"I would further like the American people to know that some of those nations which are standing out against America include the fighting Balkan states that have neither ports nor ships and want America to interfere in the land armaments of Europe to their benefit—and they are not concerned in naval armament at all.

"Our commissioners were invited to sit upon the washboard on the back porch and were permitted to go home thru the back gate. The next time they attend the conference they will find not only the front gate and the front door open, but they will be invited to sit on the haircovered sofas in the front parlor.

"For one, I have come to realize that nations, like individuals, have always been governed by force and will continue to be so governed in the future.

"Having succeeded in including the nations to destroy some of their great ships, I supposed that a friendly relation had begun and that when America sank some 800,000 tons of good steel, those other nations would appreciate the generosity expressed in our willingness to make such an enormous sacrifice.

"But when I learned in the past week that those other nations have built more ships than they sacrificed and that the spirit of the five-five-three treaty was not observed thru the construction of smaller vessels than those limited by the treaty, I began to conclude that America had been fooled.

"I plead guilty to being among those who were deluded, for I reported the bill to the house and asked the house to pass it, and requested the president to destroy more than $300,000,000 worth of good ships.

Generally Gets His

Jud Tunkins says a fool and his money are soon parted, as the old proverb says. The lawyer who parts 'em manages to hang on to his share. —Washington Star.

"I have simply promised myself—a promise that will be kept—that I will never do anything of the like again. I voted for the reduction of the amounts of money that those nations abroad admitted they owed us. I was delighted to do it. Indeed, I believe there was a time when I would have gladly remitted all the debts.

"And now I see they have been using those remissions we granted for the building of ships, and thereby compel America to spend several hundred millions in order to create a fleet comparable to theirs. Our eyes are open as far as I am concerned, and will not be closed.

American "Scrub" Oaks Being Used By France

Washington, D. C.—The small and scraggly black scrub oak, or bear oak, of barren lands in northeastern United States is being made use of in France with considerable success to provide brush cover for similar lands used as game preserves on large country estates, according to Dr. David G. Fairchild of the United States Department of Agriculture, who has recently returned from a botanical exploration that took him around the world.

The species is a dwarf oak, hardly to be dignified by the name of tree, for its usual height is seldom more than nine feet, though specially favored specimens may reach eighteen or twenty. But it grows rapidly and seems to do better on stony ground in France than any of the native shrub or small-tree species.

Would Bar Children to All Degenerates

New York.—The mentally and physically unfit should be denied children as the only means of preventing the degeneration of mankind, Dr. Adolf Lorenz, noted Vienna surgeon, said.

"Our sense of humanity is destroying humanity," he asserted. "In saving the weak of mind from the hazards of a hard and selfish world, by prolonging the lives of the constitutionally weak persons with hereditary tendencies toward physical and mental disease, we are allowing more and more of the poorer human stock to survive and reproduce."

"The only way in which to check the tendency toward degeneration and turn the tide the other way is to prevent the poorest stock from reproducing. I am afraid that we are still a long way from doing that."

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Cincinnati—As the result of a shooting which ended a quarrel over a kissing game at a party here, Arthur Wade, 37, and Rex Fowler, 36, are in a serious condition. Miss Lena Wade, sister of Wade, is held as a witness. According to her story her brother objected to Fowler engaging in the kissing game with the other women at the party.

Akron—Alfred N. Ayres, 32, of Barberton, convicted of killing his wife with a stick of fire wood on November 20, was sentenced by Common Pleas Judge L. S. Pardee to life imprisonment in the Ohio penitentiary.

Columbus—Colonel Wilson, of Belmont county, was reappointed commissioner of motor vehicles by Secretary Elect Clarence J. Brown. The Ohio State Automobile association and Automobile clubs thruout the state endorsed Wilson. Miss Nellie Gray was reappointed secretary to Wilson.

Westerville—Dr. Edmund A. Jones, 84, former state school commissioner and a professor at Otterbein university for more than 25 years died at his home here.

Akron—When two Akron-Barberton traction cars crashed at Barberton, five persons are known to have been injured. One of the motormen disregarded a rail light at a switch causing the accident officials believe.

Youngstown—Rev. Paul Rish, of Maron's church was busily engaged in sewing a rent in his cassock when he heard a command to "put up your hands." Advancing toward the gunmen as tho to obey, the priest suddenly grabbed the wrist of his assailant and wrested a pistol from his hand. As the would-be-burglar fled, Risk attempted to fire at the fleeing form but found the gun unloaded.

Insects, Savant Warns, May Displace Mankind

Cleveland, Ohio.—The biblical admonition of old: "Go to the ant, thou sluggard," was really a prophecy, for insects are about to inherit the earth. Such is the warning of Prof. Clarence H. Kennedy, Ohio State university entomologist, who declared that ants, bees, and other socialized insects may some day supersede man as lords of the universe.

During the countless ages in which man busied himself with wars and rumors of wars, the lowly ant and the busy bee have toiled away and their dominion includes the far corners of the earth, Kennedy said. Man has reached the peak of his development, Kennedy warned, and these insects may watch or accomplish his relegation to the realm of the dinosaur and the pterodactyl.

FARM TRAGEDY MAN AND WIFE ARE MURDERED

Charles Halterman Was Shot With His Own Gun and Wife Killed With Hatchet.

A woman's agonized cry of "oh, Sam, don't!" was the chief clue upon which officials were working in their search for the thieves, who early Thursday, brutally murdered Mr. and Mrs. Charles Halterman at their farm home in Northern Fayette county.

The cry was uttered by Mrs. Halterman, just before she was killed by blows from a hatchet wielded by one of the men who a moment before had murdered her husband, with his own shotgun. It has resulted in the arrest on suspicion of Samuel Satterfield, farm laborer, who is held until charges that he had made threats against Halterman are cleared up.

The Halterman's apparently were awakened from their sleep by a disturbance in their chicken coop. Arming himself with his shotgun and accompanied by his wife, Halterman went to investigate. Apparently he was met in the darkness by thieves who wrested the weapon from him, turned it upon him and later attacked the wife with a hatchet.

Leo Halterman, a brother, awakened by the gunshot, heard Mrs. Halterman's screams and ran to the aid of his relatives. When he reached the yard his brother lay dead with wounds in his head and back, and Mrs. Halterman, her head crushed and shoulders and body cut, lay dying. He heard an automobile speeding away from the house, he declared.

Sheriff Ramsey announced that he expected to arrest another man who may have had connection with the crime.

Satterfield, according to Leo Halterman, the brother, was employed at the Halterman farm last spring and was discharged for intoxication. Leo Halterman is also authority for the statement that Satterfield has been heard to make threats against Charles Halterman on several occasions.

Searchers found a bloody hatchet in the woodshed at the Halterman home, supposedly the one with which Mrs. Halterman had been murdered. No trace of Halterman's shotgun has been found, and it is supposed that the murderers took it away with them.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT ON SOUTH COURT

Ford Coupe Runs Off Culvert and Husband and Wife Painfully Injured.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Stephenson, of Kent, sustained severe injuries Thursday evening on South Court street, when their car, a Ford coupe, ran off a culvert just south of the residence of H. S. Hulse.

Mr. Stephenson was cut about the face by flying glass from the windshield and his wife sustained a fracture of her left knee cap. She was also cut about the face with broken glass.

The injured people were brought to this city by Emanuel Dresbach and were taken to the office of Dr. H. C. Allen, where they received surgical aid. The accident was explained by Mr. Stephenson, as having been caused by a nut coming off the radius rod which controls the steering gear, making control of the car impossible.

They were on their way to Jackson to spend Christmas with his parents, who later came and took them to their home at Jackson.

The High School Boys Defeat Hillsboro and Girls Take Game From Monroe.

Circleville high boys and girls' cage squads brought home the bacon in both ends of a double header at C. H. S. gym Friday night. The boys took a 20-13 decision from Hillsboro high and the girls defeated Monroe township 9-6.

The Roundtown lads who had met three straight reverses started off with a bang and got a 9 to 1 jump on their bewildered opponents. This nice lead was the result of some fine pass work and crack shooting.

As the game went on however the Tigers weakened badly and slowly the Downstaters forged forward, the count being 15 to 14 at the third quarter, Roundtown on top. The lo-cals pepped things up in the closing minutes and put the game on ice with 5 tallies.

The game was featured by Circleville's passing and Vlerebome and morning at 9 o'clock. Rev. W. S. Hills shooting, the latter being the on-Fisher will officiate. The interment will be at Kingston.

The girls' game booked as the main attraction was marred somewhat by a long delay between halves. Referee Ross who had officiated in the boys and the first half of the girls games held up his hand for silence and announced to the crowd that he knew nothing of girls rules and that he intended to quit then and there. Ross left the floor and a long, tiresome delay followed. R. R. Bales finally being engaged to complete the game.

The encounter itself was featured by close guarding on both sides as the score will indicate.

The half ended with the score 5 all but in the second session. Monroe was held to one lonely point while F. Puckett and Jones scored 3 and 1 counters respectively.

This marked the third consecutive victory for the girls and they have yet to be defeated. More power to them. During the course of the evening the newly elected Circleville cheer leading team composed of Herman Compton and Joe Barnes, junior and sophomore respectively, showed their wares in fine style.

Relay Maps Route for World's Greatest Swim

The world's greatest swim for one of the greatest prizes ever hung up—$25,000 in cash—is to be staged in Southern California January 15 and thereafter until the swim is accomplished.

The swim is the Catalina channel. It separates the island of Catalina from the California mainland. The nearest distance is approximately twenty-three miles.

In the English channel the big problem was rough water and tides. In the Catalina channel an entirely new problem comes up. It is currents and change of temperature in the water.

Along the California shore the temperature is, as noted, 67 degrees. This is ideal for swimming. It is a factor that has made the California beaches the most popular in the world. But as one gets out a mile or so from shore the temperature starts downward. There is always a variable of eight degrees and frequently a greater variable. The shore temperature remains steadily at about 67 degrees and the channel temperature dropping to ten or even twelve degrees lower.

That the channel can be crossed by a swimmer has been demonstrated. Recently Fred Cady, coach at the Los Angeles athletic club, who has been a large factor in turning out crack California swimmers, crossed it with a relay of swimmers. The first in the water was Viola Hartman Cady, his wife. After she swam a mile, another swimmer entered. Temperatures were taken as the swimmers stroked across the water. They are shown. The journey with fourteen swimmers in the relay took 23 hours and seventeen minutes, and the zigzag course measured 33 miles. This is indicative of the difficulty of the swim. Trudy Ederle swam the English channel alone in fourteen and one half hours.

But then the English channel swimmers swam for glory. This swim is for $25,000. The effort to cross on January 15 will be enormous. Will it be done?

Spiritual Symbols Will Grace Floral Tourney

A new fame and a new glory is to be shed on Pasadena's famous Tournament of Roses on this coming New Year's day. This year the cities will send floats as before, but they will be expressive of a more spiritual side of life. Some will represent songs. Others will represent graces and abstractions such as beauty, idealism, courage, patriotism, faith, hope, charity and kindness.

The new note was given to the great day of flowers by Carrie Jacobs Bond, shown in the inset, and others of the famous creative artists of Southern California. They believed that in the twenty years of showing that the tourney had outgrown its primary inter-city competition. All of the cities tell in with the idea and this year will bring to their aid the ablest creative minds in the Southland in the fabrication of their entries.

As in the past all of the flowers used in the parade must be such as can be grown in Southern California at the New Year Season. These include roses of every description, carnations, sweet peas, calendulas, narcissus, bachelor buttons, larkspur, violets, marigolds, baby breath, heather, sunflowers, bougainvillea, geraniums, calla lilies, orange blossoms, shasta daisies, chrysanthemums, poinsettias, straw flowers, camellias, tulips, daffodils, poppies, California poppies, pansies, sweet alyssum, azaleas, dahlias, simlax, English ivy, asparagus, plumosa, evergreens (all varieties), hawthorne, holly, sage, dogberry and huckleberry.

Bird Named for Saint Peter

The bird petrel, says Time, is named for Saint Peter, who tried, through faith in Christ, to walk on the waters of Galilee. The petrels have webbed feet which they trail upon the sea's surface as they search for food, often actually "running" with assistance from their wings.

AMUSEMENTS

From "come-on" to caddy is the range covered by Eddie Cantor, ace of Broadway comedians in "Kid Boots," Paramount's comedy which opened at the Met theater last night.

The Florenz Ziefeld success, "Kid Boots," with Cantor as its star, ran for three years in New York, setting a high attendance mark by playing to more than a million people. It is safe to predict that Cantor's first film will also roll up new records for productions of this kind, and that it will also definitely establish Eddie as one of filmdom's best bets.

"Kid Boots" convulsed last night's audience with one laugh after another. It starts in an east side clothing store. Cantor is the "come-on" who forcibly lures customers in from the street.

Eddie finds himself enmeshed in a maze of difficulties when he "fits" Malcolm Waite, a husky swimming instructor, with a coat. Therefore, when Waite returns to get his money back—the fun begins. Then—the plot thickens as do the laughter and action. With the aid of Lawrence Gray, a rich young man endeavoring to escape a marriage into which he has been tricked, Cantor temporarily escapes from one predicament only to land in another.

Gray takes Cantor under his wing, and to hide from his unwanted wife, Natalie Kingston, they go to an exclusive golf club. Eddie, never having seen a golf ball in his life, furnishes some "top-hole" entertainment. Clara Bow and Billie Dove being at the same club the former promptly captures Eddie's heart while Gray capitulates to Billie. Waite objects to Eddie's attentions and—

The story concludes in rapid fashion with some of the funniest scenes ever filmed. Directed by Frank Tuttle, "Kid Boots" is one of the best comedies seen this season.

Creatures of the Wild

Apart from a few insects, no creature of the wild does any more work than is necessary to feed itself and its family. But appetites vary, and while an animal like the mole cannot go without food for more than three or four hours, and will starve to death in a single night, others, such as the python, feed but once in six or eight weeks.

Long Labor Unfinished

Pierre de Ronsard of the Sixteenth century was the father of lyric poetry in France. To be a second Homer he undertook a long epic poem, which he worked on for twenty-five years, and left unfinished.

Composition of Brain

In some places the layer of gray matter which composes the brain is a quarter of an inch thick, while in the thinner parts it is but one-tenth of an inch thick.

His Winning Stenographer

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

"I DON'T mind telling you," confided young Jimmy Dawson to his friend Charley Underwood, as they smoked their post-lunch cigars in the Belmont grill, "that Lesbia Carroll is just about all the brains in our firm. That girl's a marvel!"

"She's an easy creature to look at, also," replied Charley. "I've known her for years."

"Righto!" Then Dawson frowned. "There's something worrying me. The little simpleton has entered this fool contest for the world's best-looking and speediest typist, and I'm scared silly she'll win."

"If she did," finished Charley, "she'd be snapped up by 'movie' men and the firm would lose its brains."

"You've said it," returned his friend gloomily. "But worse even than that, the girl would be utterly spoiled."

"Pardon my inquiry, but have you—any personal interest in that matter?" asked Charley gently.

"Certainly not!" retorted the other with apparent sincerity. "Pure altruism alone incites me. If I could think of some scheme by which she could be kept from entering the finals, I would not hesitate to save her from herself."

"You'd stop at nothing?"

"Well, almost nothing!"

"I've got it, then!" and Charley slapped his knee. "You say your sister is at her place on Long Island? Well, listen, here!"

An hour later, Lesbia Carroll looked up from her desk to see her employer striding towards her with an expression of determination on his face.

Looking down into her blue eyes, "Are you still set on being in that contest?" he demanded.

Lesbia tossed her curly bobbed head. "Certainly," she said. "Why not?"

Now young Jimmy had not been altogether sincere about his interest in Lesbia. In spite of himself, it was fast growing personal, but he would not recognize it if Lesbia persisted in advertising herself throughout the country.

Therefore, he now hedged somewhat in his reply. "There are many reasons, Miss Carroll. You are bound to lose interest in your work with us. And—and—oh, hang it—"

Lesbia flushed. "Please, Mr. Dawson. Please!"

"It's no use," he presently telephoned Charley. "She will go into the thing and with her looks and speed, she's bound to win. I'll get hold of my sister—lucky they used to be old friends in school—and we'll carry out that little plan. Means I've got to get in a substitute here, but it's worth the trouble. It's up to you to see that your arrival with Lesbia is quite too late for the final contest."

Now to do Jimmy's sister justice, she was not informed as to just why Lesbia was sent to her for a week-end visit other than that Jimmy thought she needed a rest. But because she had been asked to include Jimmy's old friend, Charley Underwood, in the house party, she suspected a love affair and managed to throw them into each other's company as much as possible.

Therefore, upon that poor man fell the duty of playing Machiavelli at the same time that he was supposed to be enacting the role of an ardent Romeo. And it was probably not the first time that a well-meaning friend cursed his well-meaning friendship for precipitating him into unseen difficulties.

On the morning when the final contest was to be held, Jimmy Dawson's cruiser swung slowly up the East river.

Her owner was pacing the dock at which she was to land, and now and then he glanced nervously at his watch, while a few yards away, a taxicab with its engine still running, quivered on the cobblestones.

As the boat drew near, Jimmy went over to the top of the ladder which led down to the boat and, as Lesbia started up, he reached down and grabbed her arm. "Hurry, Lesbia," he cried.

"The contest was postponed until eleven, but we've only about fifteen—no, thirteen minutes, in which to make it. Hurry!"

But Lesbia seemed in no great haste, while Charley, now on the scene, was regarding Jimmy with an expression decidedly curious.

"Hurry," said Jimmy. "Only twelve minutes!"

"But I'm not going to enter!" cried Lesbia. "I know that Charley, for some reason or other, doesn't want me to. Ever since we left your sister's, he has been inventing delays and imagining that one thing after another was wrong with the boat. We've stopped twenty times on the way!" Then she slipped an arm through Charley's. "Mr.—or—Dawson, Charley and I—"

she paused.

"Sorry, old man," said Charley. "You see—we've gone and fallen in love and now she's won me, she doesn't seem to care about winning anything else!"

Jimmy grabbed their hands. "Congratulations!" he said, and there was no doubting his sincerity.

But later when the two men were alone, Charley could not refrain from just one question. "How come, Jimmy, you made such a right-about-face about Lesbia's going in for that affair?"

Jimmy looked sheepish. "I—I sort of lost interest in what she did," he confessed. "And I didn't want it on my conscience that I'd stood in her way. I—I say, Charley, you ought to see the girl who's taking her place! Gloria, her name is—well, gosh, she's got brains, too!"
